Nvolve Limited help's companies to embrace the benefits of SCORM compliant training courses

The lack of technical standards in the past has slowed down e-learning's progress for many companies. With proprietary systems working independently of one another it proved difficult to find, share, reuse and import new learning content. Sharable content object reference model (SCORM) is a collection of standards and specification for web-based e-learning that Nvolve Limited has integrated into their learning management systems and are working with a number of organisations to help eliminate many of the problems that they have encountered.

By integrating SCORM standards with their learning management system, Nvolve's technology is helping many companies manage and report on training activities at the click of a button. Nvolve's training content is all SCORM compliant and their LMS gives their clients the capability to create their own interactive training material, very simply, by using the Nvolve Microsoft PowerPoint add-on which can convert their PowerPoint classroom training material into SCORM compliant on-line training material.

Nvolve Limited's solution enables companies to train employees not only online, but by utilising their training keypads and taking the elearning course offline, clients can train employees in groups as well. This is all at a fraction of the cost of traditional training methods. As a hosted managed service, it can be delivered rapidly and with minimal costs.
